

2011 Successful Show is History

The 2011 Wisconsin Farm Technology Days in Marathons County was considered very successful based on feedback received from many exhibitors and show visitors. The attendance for the three-day show was estimated to be just under 60,000. Nearly all the exhibits and equipment have been removed, see photo below. Activities on Seehafer Acres are returning to normal.

A special thank you goes to the volunteers who spent countless hours insuring the success of the show especially after impact the July 1 wind storm. The support of the more than 600 exhibitors is recognized and greatly appreciated. Countless other people are thanked including land enforcement which resulted in excellent traffic movement to and from the show.

As this show closes, the plans for the 2012 show in Outagamie County near New London are moving rapidly. That show will be July 17-19 on two dairy farm.

A view of the tent city site on Sunday, July 24. Some machinery and several trailers remained. Collecting wood chips is progressing with one of the large piles visible in this picture.
